Numerous inquiries have been received concerning "blocked funds deposits" relative to proposed brokered loans. Further, it has been revealed that several banks have confirmed such blocked funds deposits even though no such deposits exist. Such confirmations expose banks to possible civil litigation initiated by innocent third-party victims. The promoters of such programs cite funds in the hundreds of millions of dollars. Blocked funds deposits as promoted are not known to exist in the legitimate banking community. It is recommended that banks use extreme caution when approached to become involved.
